

HARNESS RACING WITHOUT BETTING

Andy Welch Still Believes That It Can Be Made to Pay Liberally.

FEATURES OF BIG FAIRS

He May Make Trial by Organizing a New England Circuit, Including Readville.

That harness racing can be made to pay without public betting is the belief of A. J. Welch, the owner of the Readville, Mass., track. He now knows that the entertainment he gave the public at his track this season cost too much money. The $50,000 handicap race was a very costly feature. It drew a large crowd, but it was a losing proposition. Many old-time horsemen do not take to the handicap idea of racing, but Mr. Welch is still firm in the belief that it is the kind of racing that will bring the crowd. But no association can afford to put on a race like the one at Readville last summer without asking grand opera prices, and it is evident that the followers of the harness horse are not educated up to paying them.

Since the close of the racing season at Readville, says a New England exchange, Mr. Welch has been going along with the work of improving the property, and there is no doubt that Readville will be on the map next season, with a grand circuit meeting and possibly with a big fair. The proposition to form a big New England fair circuit, to be composed of Readville, Hartford, Providence, Brockton and possibly another member, looks like a good idea to horsemen who have raced at the big fairs in their sections of the country. It is a matter of record how successful the Brockton fair has been. It is true that in the result of years of good management, but it certainly looks as though equally successful fairs could be held in Boston and in Providence. On the day that the Charter Oak stake was raced this year, it is probable that the largest number of spectators that ever witnessed a trotting race saw the great four-year-old stallion, The Harvester, take the measure of Bob Douglas. The Brockton management hangs up $1,000 and $500 purses, but if it was one of a line of meetings that would give the best horses a chance to race for four or five weeks it would be possible for the management to give a number of races for large purses, with perhaps one or two $10,000 early closing events. With a chance to enter their horses in valuable events of this kind, the fair would be a great attraction. The future of harness racing in this section of the country will depend upon combining it with the other features that go to make up the successful modern fair.

The fair associations in the West have found that it pays to give purses large enough to attract the best horses, and there is no reason why the fair proposition would not appeal to the people of this part of the country as strongly as it does to those in the sections where they are a great success.

It can be safely predicted that there will eventually be a big fair at Readville track and those who know Mr. Welch will have little doubt that if it fails it will not be because it did not start on broad and up-to-date lines which should insure its success. The future of harness racing in this section of the country will depend upon combining it with the other features that go to make up the successful modern fair.

REGIMENT BEATS CHESTNUT HILL

The First Virginia Regiment eleven kept up its winning streak yesterday by defeating the Chestnut Hill team at Byrd Park by a score of 2 to 0. The teams were evenly matched, and the only score was on a safety. The eleven often resorted to punting, as neither seemed able to gain by straight football.

The line-up is as follows: Regiment. Positions. Chestnut Hill. Meyer, left end. Schaefer. Kelly, left tackle. Griffith. Kelly, left guard. Brown. Layne, center. Kelly (Irish). Luffy, right guard. Quarles. Campbell, right tackle. Car. Herbert, right end. Quarles. West (capt), quarter back. Gresham. Blunt, left half back. Catlin (captain).

Caulder, right half back. Gregory. Buggs, full back. Lutz (captain). McFarland, of Richmond College, referee. Disappe, umpire. Desales and Cousins, timekeepers.

COFFROTH MAY ARRANGE BIG FISTIC CARNIVAL

Talk of Other Fights at Time of Jeffries-Johnson Bout if Colma Promoter Gets Contract for Latter.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) NEW YORK, November 6.—Promoter Coffroth, of Colma, says that he is making arrangements to pull off a fight between Abe Attell and Jim Driscoll at his arena on Christmas Day. Attell and Driscoll are now trying to get the consent of Driscoll, who is still in England, but expects to sail for this country in a few days.

Coffroth thinks that a Driscoll-Attell bout of twenty-five or thirty-five rounds for the featherweight championship of the world would draw a big gate, and would also prove one of the most sensational ring encounters in the history of pugilism.

Coffroth, by the way, has received a suggestion that if he secures the Jeffries-Johnson fight, he might arrange a three-day fistic carnival, adding a battle between Nelson and the winner of the Wolgast-Powell bout, and a contest between the winner of the proposed Attell-Driscoll affair and Owen Moran.

Coffroth, incidentally, thinks that he will land the big fight, inasmuch as Jeffries fought four championship battles, with Ruhlman, Corbett, Fitzsimmons and Monroe, under the auspices of the Colma Club, and took down $75,000 as his share of the spoils.

Big League Baseball Talk.

In behalf of the owners of the Philadelphia National League Club, Horace Fogel makes the unqualified statement that no deal for the exchange of outfielder McGee for Mike Donlin, of the Giants, will be entertained. Fogel says the Quakers do not want Donlin at any price, and that if John T. Brush should offer $25,000 cash for McGee, the Quakers magnates would turn him down.

President Johnson, of the American League, has just made his annual declaration that the major leagues' playing schedules should be limited to 140 games. Johnson believes that the pennant races should end on September 15, so that the world's championship series cannot run off of wintry weather.

But the club owners, who have never been accused of dodging dollars, refuse to look through Johnson's spectacles, and when the time comes to consider the matter it is probably a sure thing that the 161-game schedule will prevail.

BAN JOHNSON WILL OPPOSE LENGTHENING OF SEASON

In Fact, American League President Is in Favor of Cutting the Schedule to 140 Games, Just as It Used to Be a Few Years Ago.

CHICAGO, November 6.—Whatever the National League does with the proposition to lengthen the playing schedule to 148 games its young rival, the American, either will hold to the present season of 144 or hope back to 140 contests very early.

This was the positive announcement of President Ban Johnson after he had discussed the matter with the big league executives. "The American League will not increase the number of games," said the executive. "If any action at all is taken it will be to cut the engagements to 140. The league would do this right now if the National League agreed to follow suit."

"We believe the present season is too long, and it is our idea to start about the first day of May and wind up on the 1st of October. This would mean a season of 140 games. Spectators and players would escape a lot of disagreeable weather, and the public would not grow weary of the game before the end of the season. The American League always has opposed the long schedule, and we will continue to do so."

"Recent stories in the papers may have led to the belief that both the major leagues would have a longer season. The league does not want this impression to grow. I don't know what the National League will do, but I do know that we will second any motion to cut to 140 games. There isn't a chance for us to schedule as many as 148."

President Comiskey agrees with President Johnson that the present season is not a bit too short. He said the White Sox would play to-day, tomorrow and the day after ahead to have the flag clinched, but that it wasn't pleasant to keep going when the club was hopelessly out of the race.

Some Star With Losers.

"Take Walter Johnson for instance. Put him on the Chicago National League club with its fine defensive work, and he wouldn't use five games a season, provided the Cubs could get a couple of runs a game for him. Another good man with a poor club is Jack Donohue, who is one of the best left-handers who ever stepped in a pair of shoes. Look at Mathewson's work this season. He has been a star with the Cubs, a lot of good pitchers with poor clubs who don't have the records of some others, yet pitch just as good ball as the league's leading winners."

Looked Good in Final.

This fellow Adams, of Pittsburgh, looked good in the final game at Detroit, though his record does not show it. He had a nice curve ball, good control and plenty of nerve in the closing contest of the world's series. I would like to see him work when he had to go some and pitch himself out of a few holes. That's the real test.

I honestly believe that if a manager had the proposition put up to him to select the best pitcher from among the ten leaders in either league, he would have a hard time choosing. And it is a cinch that when he once had to pick, he would pick himself for taking some one else.

August 1—At Big Stone Springs, Ky.—Black, Charles, after making a sensational running catch, stumbled and broke his neck as the crowd cheered him as he fell for making the catch. He did not know he was dead when he lay on the ground for several minutes.
